YOU CAN'T STOP BRETT!

(Wish We Could Say the Same for the Pack)

The When our hero Brett Favre sustained an arm injury and then sat out the second-half of Green Bay's loss to the Patriots two-weeks ago, some Packers' fans wondered if GB's QB would be back in the huddle the following week. But c'mon, was there really any doubt?

In the past, "Iron Man" Brett has played games following a variety of injuries and ailments such as a separated shoulder, a deep thigh bruise, injured left hip, tendonitis, a sprained foot, a sprained ligament, a broken thumb, an intestindectomy, heckled funny bone, sensitive teeth, bad bed-head hair, runny toes, bees knees, heartburn, swollen Glansvilles, enlarged #4-skin, a fracture of the petulla obondala, Bear-itis, bar-b-qued spare ribs, pulled wish bone, a wet willie, various cricks, strains, bends and twists, and (like most of us) he's had a history of dropping his ass every now and again. But through it all, Brett has not missed a game since the beginning of his amazing consecutive streak-of-starts for the Pack back in 1992. Aside from holding nearly all of the passing records in Green Bay Packers' history, Brett is also closing in on a number of other important NFL records as well (See official NFL chart). And those he doesn't break this year, he'll get the next... right Brett?

In related news, the Chicago Bears broke their own record, now making it 85 consecutive years of being the most annoying team in the NFL. Congratulations!

Fan's Admiration of Rex Grossman Not Reciprocated

Roman Pyszmowski, a 47-year-old lifetime resident of Chicago, claims to be the biggest Rex Grossman fan in the Windy City and is the owner of the most comprehensive collection of Grossman memorabilia in the entire state of Illinois. "I love my man Rex! And I appreciate everything he's done for da-Bearszzzzz." Pyszmowski said he always shows up at each and every Chicago game at Soldier Field wearing his extra-extra-large Bears' jersey. But he added, "I'm always shirtless during the game so hopefully Rex can see the humungous Grossman tattoo I got last year. But because it's on my back, I always seem to miss a lot of the action on the field."

Although Pyszmowski seems to know everything about Rex Grossman, Grossman says he doesn't know who the hell Pyszmowski is. "Pyszmowski? Never heard of him," said Grossman. But when a reporter said the guy was a big fan, Grossman said, "Well, that's different. Whatever. Have him e-mail the Bears and we'll send him an 8x10 picture of me signed by my secretary. He'll need to cover the postage, though." Grossman added, "Yeah, listen, I'd love to stand around and chat, but I've gotta sit down in the lobby and wait for my limo."

Die-hard Chicago fan (circa 2004) just wants to give Rex Grossman a big ol' Bear-hug.

Hey! It's the Miller family! Joe "Mama" Miller (#911) poses with the lovely Miller Beer girls. Ivana Miller and Anita Miller stopped by last week to give away some prizes and to remind Joe of the restraining order.

Although Packer Jayme and Packer Mike loved having the option of "super-sizing" their beers with their CFPB membership cards at One Eyed Jack's, they hated having to spend the entire second half of the Packers' game in the restroom.

IMPORTANT DATES in Green Bay Packers' History July 15, 2006

The U.S. Navy christened a 684-foot warship which was given the name the "U.S.S. Green Bay." The battleship, which is still under construction in Louisiana, will be commissioned in 2008. According to Fleet Admiral Stephanie Favre, the U.S.S. Green Bay's first scheduled mission will be to torpedo Soldier Field.
